Description
The upgrade system uses the name of the image files to get the timestamp to compare it with the current version installed.
Since some time ago the image files names have been changed in the repository, now the upgrade system doesn't get properly the timestamp and can't determine if there is a new version available.

The upgrade system can be fixed, but all nodes with an old firmware will not download automatically the image for the upgrade anymore, and should be downloaded manually then.
